

U. S. BREAK WITH CARRANZA LOOMS NEARER AS REPORTS SUBSTANTIATE CAVALRY MASSACRE

EXPECT ORDER SHORTLY FOR U. S. OCCUPATION OF NORTHERN MEXICO

AFFAIR AT CARRIZAL MAY CALL FOR PROMPT, WARLIKE MEASURES ON PART OF AMERICAN FORCES.

MORE HOSTILE THREATS

Gen. Trevino Reiterates Orders for Attack on American Columns Reported to Be Moving From Field Base in Mexico.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, June 24.—Relations between the United States and the de facto government of Mexico, are close to the breaking point today as a result of the apparently well-founded belief that two troops of American cavalry were massacred Wednesday at Carrizal by Carranza soldiers.

It is considered certain by officials that occupation of most of northern Mexico will be ordered by Wilson to take place as rapidly as possible.

Mexicans Plan Attacks.

Chihuahua City, June 24.—American columns have been seen advancing from the American field base in the direction of San Antonio and Ojo Caliente, and General Trevino has issued orders to attack them if they do not immediately retreat.

General Trevino said the Americans would get the same treatment they received at Carrizal as he is determined to carry out his orders to the letter.

In this, he said, he had all his subordinates with him and they will stick with him in case of a rupture.

Column, Negro Survivors?

El Paso, June 24.—Army officers here believe the column bound for Ojo Caliente, which General Trevino has threatened to attack, probably is composed of the troops surviving the Carrizal battle.

Reports on Carrizal Massacre.

San Antonio, June 24.—Complete disorganization of two troops that were engaged in disastrous combat Wednesday at Carrizal, and the capture of Carranza's troops and practical annihilation of those actually in the fight was indicated in a report from General Pershing to General Funston today.

One trooper and eight enlisted men of "D" troop, and seven men of "K" troop, were picked up yesterday morning by Lieutenant Meyer, near Santa Maria. All were horseholders. The stories the men told were almost identical to those told by the other stragglers that reached the transmission lines yesterday.

Fifty-Seven Missing.

General Pershing in his report today related to the number of those captured soldiers who previously returned to the American lines as eleven. Although in previous dispatches he fixed the number at seven. With those who were rescued by Lieutenant Meyer, the total number was twenty-seven. The total number of men in the two troops, it was learned today, was to have been thirty-four.

General Pershing, offering a summary of his information and explaining that his conclusions were based on such information as he had secured from the stragglers and from press reports, called attention to the indications that there were fifty-seven missing and press reports indicated fourteen of them were dead and forty-three were prisoners.

General Pershing reported he had received no reports from the commander of the second squadron of Seventh Cavalry that had been sent to rescue the remnant of the tenth.

Captured Scout's Statement.

Chihuahua City, June 24.—According to a statement said to have been signed by Lem Spillsbury, a former editor captured at Carrizal, which was made public today by General Trevino, neither he nor the negro American cavalry men knew which side began the firing.

Spillsbury's statement says that C. troops was the first to advance against the Mexicans. He adds that practically all Americans who lost their lives were killed when they advanced to a deep ditch in which Mexicans were stationed and when other Mexicans setting around to the deep ditch in the rear attacked them from the flank.

The prisoners were assumed by Mexican civilians as they were being transferred from the train to the penitentiary, but were landed safely because the walls of the building, and according to authorities, are being well guarded.

The Mexican commander said that it seemed probable inasmuch as General Pershing seems ignorant of the Ford column, that out of the Ford column prisoners now being brought here, the Americans were annihilated, although it is possible more had escaped.

General Pershing has wired how for the names of the dead and the prisoners.

It was officially announced today that none of the prisoners brought here, he hanged, that "not being the custom of a civilized country."

Spillsbury's story is as follows:

"The troops were about 200 yards apart during the conference. Captain Boyd and I advanced and I was twenty minutes after we returned to our respective lines, and Boyd had given numerous orders to the men and those of Captain Morey who were stationed some distance away in line, before Boyd gave the order to advance."

"Don't Know Who Fired First."

The opposing sides were within 100 yards of each other, when the firing began. Neither the negroes nor I knew who fired first. I remained behind.

"C" troop got as far as a deep ditch, where the Mexicans were placed. Practically all lost their lives there, including Boyd and Adair. The Mexicans did heavy work with machine guns, and then getting around to the deep ditch in the rear attacked the Americans from that point.

"The whole of C. troops was surrounded, and not many seemed to get away. I thought he started. H. troop apparently fared better, as it was farther away. A bullet took off my hat and another grazed my arm. One of the negroes who was captured, is now in the hands of the Mexicans."

"In all here, the negroes are very bitter about being led into what they call a dead-fall. They were entirely in the open with natural defenses all around them, such as brush and cacti, which the Mexicans naturally took advantage of."

"The Mexicans engaged were about 250 in number."

The statement concludes by crediting Spillsbury with saying that in the first conference he told Lieutenant Colonel Trevino that if personally he were able to get word to General Pershing, he believed he could avert the trouble that threatened and that he concluded when he heard after the seven survivors of the Carrizal battle had returned to their base in General Pershing's camp and they brought no definite words of the others late.

In preparation for early development of serious nature, technical barriers had been removed to allow the national guard units from all over the country to be dispatched to the border as soon as each is ready.

Secretary Baker had issued orders urging extreme haste and final action was assumed by congress today to allow President Wilson to draft immediately for service either in or out of the United States all national guardsmen who subscribed to the oath.

The Hay resolution containing this authorization adopted by the house yesterday was before the senate today with virtual assurance it would be approved.

President Wilson still awaited final report from General Pershing on the Carrizal clash, and the army officers said it might be another day or two before this arrived.

Admiral Winslow commander of the Pacific fleet also has been ordered to make full report as soon as possible on the Mazatlan incident. Evidence now available from American sources show that in both Mazatlan and Carrizal clashes, Carranza authorities precipitated the fighting. At Carrizal it appears the assault was treacherous and without warning.

When final reports arrive the Washington government is expected to use them as basis for direct relations with the Mexican government, that Americans were the aggressors. Demands probably will be made that the act be disavowed and the Mexican punished. Officially, however, whether the Carranza government will consent to a complete disavowal.

White House Conference

Secretary Lansing and Secretary Baker went to the White House at ten this morning for a conference with the President. Both said as they left their offices, that there had been no report from General Pershing and the policy of the government was unchanged.

Secretary Baker said after the conference that no immediate change in the Mexican policy was contemplated by the United States and that no new military orders were planned.

In reply to an inquiry as to whether the United States had requested the release of the American prisoners at Carrizal and taken to Chihuahua City, he said:

"I cannot discuss that subject now."

Secretary Lansing emerged from the White House about ten minutes after Secretary Baker. He turned to newspaper men and said:

On returning to his office, Secretary Lansing, for the first time since he became secretary of state, cancelled his morning engagement with the newspaper men, and sent word by his private secretary that there was nothing he could discuss at that time.

WEST ISSUES CALL FOR STATE G. O. P. TO NAME STATE TICKET

Convention to Indorse Candidate for Five State Offices Will Be Held at Madison July 12.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Milwaukee, June 24.—The state convention of Republicans to indorse candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer and attorney general will be held at the university gymnasium in Madison on July 12 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The call was sent out on Friday by George A. West, chairman of the convention committee of the Republican state central committee.

Gov. B. L. Philipp will again be indorsed for governor. Republicans in all parts of the state are eagerly awaiting the governor's announcement of his candidacy for re-election.

Alvin P. Kietzsch, chairman of the Republican state central committee, will be asked to open the convention. Mr. West will announce the permanent chairman of the meeting at a later date. Dr. Frank Smith of Madison, who has acted as the last two Republican conventions, will again be asked to be the permanent chairman.

"The call is so worded that any county, district or precinct has the right to hold caucuses to name the delegates," said Mr. West. "While this may be done in some instances, I do not believe it will be generally practiced as the time is too short. The badges to be given the various delegates who apply will be the credentials."

The convention has been called as the result of scores of letters from all parts of the state asking that this be done.

In case the gymnasium is undergoing repairs at the time we shall hold the convention in the university stock pavilion.

"More than 1,700 delegates from all parts of the state attended the last convention and it anticipated an even larger attendance on July 12."

Text of the Call.

The call sent out by Mr. West follows:

"On Wednesday, July 12, 1916, at 2 p. m., there will be held at the gymnasium, Madison, Wis., a convention or conference of the Republicans of the state of Wisconsin for the purpose of deliberating and acting upon the indorsement of candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer and attorney general, respectively, to be voted for at the September primary to be held in the several cities, villages, towns and precincts of this state and for passing all desirable resolutions and the doing of any and all things that may seem proper in the best interests of the Republican party."

All Republicans are invited, and in order that a seat and badge may be provided for each delegate, those desiring to attend will please inform George A. West, chairman convention committee, 1404 First National Bank building, Milwaukee, Wis. Badges will be delivered at the Park hotel, Madison, on the day of the convention, which will be a sufficient credential for your admission."

Cousins Has Following.

The call is signed by Mr. West and the other two members of the convention committee, George L. Gordon of La Crosse and E. F. Lyons of Fond du Lac.

For lieutenant governor Maj. Marshall Cousins of Eau Claire has a strong following. Maj. Cousins showed great strength two years ago when he ran with Gov. Philipp.

Maj. Cousins was one of those to answer the president's call and is now at Camp Douglas awaiting word to leave for the Mexican border.

Many of the delegates are known to favor the indorsement of Treasurer Henry Johnson for that office.

The presentation of a slate is not contemplated and the selection of the candidates will be entirely in the hands of the delegates themselves.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, June 24.—News that some of the South and Central American republics were preparing to initiate efforts of mediation in the crisis between the United States and Mexico drew from high officials here today a strong intimation that the United States is engaged only in protecting its people and territory, and considered there was nothing to mediate so far as the policy of this country was concerned.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS MACHINE CO. PICNIC

Hundreds at Vest Park Today at Annual Outing of Implement Plant's Employees.

Close to one thousand picnickers were at Vest park as noon today at the annual outing of the Janesville Machine company. The picnic was the eighteenth annual affair of its nature and as early as noon was dedicated to be the most successful ever held.

The first special interurban cars for the park left the corner of Main and Court streets shortly after nine o'clock. They were crowded to the limit with employees and their families and friends, all loaded down with well-filled baskets and boxes for the big dinner at noon. Coffee, sugar and cream were furnished gratis by the company.

At 10:30 o'clock the program of field and aquatic sports commenced. Contestants of all ages, men, women and children, were willing entrants in the various lists.

The events were thoroughly enjoyed, all the happy picnickers joining in to make the outing a pleasurable one. In the 100 yard dash, William Sullivan won handsily. The other events were won by the following persons: 100 yard dash for boys, R. Collins 1st and S. Bauman 2nd; 100 feet dash for women, Miss Hazel Myhr 1st and Mrs. E. J. Hanson 2nd; race for girls, Mary Sheridan 1st and Mary Garry 2nd; sack race, Charles Fischer 1st, Archie McBride 2nd and Clifford Wilson 3rd; three legged race, Joe Steed and Frank Garry; wheelbarrow race, Frank Dunn and John Butler; pig-a-back race, Andrew Timpton and Carl Jordan. The tug of war was won by the team captained by John Flemming. The pie eating contest was won by Stuart Terwilliger and Leo Dooley. The duck race was won by Carl Jordan and the guessing contest by Miss Hattie Lundtke.

After a real picnic dinner, other games were played this afternoon previous to the ball game in which the office and shop forces were to settle their grudge. The Janesville Red Sox will play the Beloit Fairbanks-Morse apprentice team in the main event of the afternoon.

SENATE CUTS RELIEF PART OF HAY BILL

COMMITTEE ELIMINATES MILLION DOLLAR FUND FROM MEASURE APPROVING DRAFT OF NATIONAL GUARD.

BALK INCREASED PAY

Senator Gore's Objections to Bill Boosting Pay of Enlisted Men in Militia, Precipitates Debate.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, June 24.—Stripped of its million dollar relief provision for families of militia men, the senate military committee today ordered favorably reported the Hay resolution adopted by the house yesterday to authorize drafting the national guard into the service of the United States. A substitute for the relief provision directs that militiamen having dependent families should be discharged at once.

Serve During Emergency.

The senate committee also eliminated the provisions that militiamen to be drafted into the regular service, should serve "not exceeding three years," thus providing that they shall remain in service "for the period of the emergency." As passed the measure stands virtually as it first was introduced in the house.

Blocks Pay Increase.

Objection by Senator Gore blocked immediate consideration in the senate today of a bill introduced by Senator Reed, to increase the pay of enlisted men of the national guard while in the federal service, to thirty dollars and resulted in a bitter exchange between the two senators. Senator Gore declared to pass such a measure was to capitalize patriotism and to notify the militia men they would be regarded as "sunshine patriots."

Reed in Rejoinder.

This drew a vigorous denunciation from the Missouri senator who said it was unworthy of his colleagues to sit idly behind a mabogany desk and sneer at a young man in khaki uniform preparing to defend his country. The resolution was referred to the military committee.

ESTABLISH HOSPITAL FOR STATE SOLDIERS

Brigade Hospital at La Crosse for the Soldiers Stationed at Camp Douglas.

La Crosse, Wis., June 24.—A brigade hospital for the Wisconsin soldiers was established at La Crosse today by order of General Holway, commanding the Wisconsin concentration camp of 4,200 soldiers at Camp Douglas. Only one patient is as yet in the hospital, Frank Streipling, a Milwaukee soldier, who suffered an acute attack of appendicitis yesterday and was brought here for an operation. He is in a serious condition and may not recover.

No other cases of sickness at all serious have occurred in the three days the men have been in camp, though they have camped out in cold weather and heavy rains.

Major D. S. McArthur, surgeon of the third regiment, ordered every man in the regiment to report to the regimental hospital for examination, even though entirely well, and the closest study is made of each soldier for possible ailments. The other surgeons are proceedings on the same line conforming with General Holway's orders to make the camp a model one from the standpoint of health.

As tomorrow will be the only Sunday that the Wisconsin soldiers are expected to be at Camp Douglas, it is expected many thousands will visit the camp from all parts of the state.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, June 24.—Corporal Victor Chapman of New York, a member of the Franco-American flying corps, was killed yesterday at Verdun after bringing down three German aeroplanes. Sergeant Gorman Prince and the captain of the Franco-American flying corps were engaged with a vastly superior force when Corporal Chapman went to their rescue. He flew into the midst of the German flotilla, which engaged him hotly from all sides.

By maneuvering quickly Chapman succeeded in bringing down three of his antagonists. Then a bullet from one of the remaining German aircraft killed him outright in the chest.

His aeroplane plucked to the ground within the French lines.

FRENCH REGAIN GROUND

French in Furious Counter Attack Snatch Village of Fleury From Teutons—Vast Numbers Engaged in Battle.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, June 24.—Capture of the armed fortress of Thiaumont, north of Verdun, and the fort and village of Fleury further south was announced today by the war office. Ground also was gained south of Vaux. The Germans made 260 prisoners.

French Regain Positions.

Paris, June 24.—The battle of Verdun continued last night with the utmost violence on both sides of the Meuse. The war office announced today the French have regained a large part of the ground lost northeast of fighting near Verdun equalled in fury.

Late details show that the French fighting near Verdun equalled in fury anything yet experienced. The total German forces engaged on the two mile front are estimated at between four and five divisions. There was only a vast overwhelming rush when the defenders were worn out and tired by many hours of bombardment, the enemy succeeded in rushing Thiaumont, works and the adjacent advance trenches.

The Thiaumont fortifications cover the approaches to Fleury and the enemy hoped to continue the charge and sweep away the defenders of the latter place, but the French counter attacked with such vigor that it was able only to cling to the position first gained, which it was busily engaged in strengthening all night, in preparation for fresh attempt to push its advance.

Success Cost Heavy.

Commentators in morning papers freely admit that the Germans scored a success, but that the success cost more than it was worth. The enemy's losses being placed at from 40 to 50 per cent of effectives engaged.

Undertaking a vigorous offensive, the French drove back the Germans over ground which they won yesterday. The battle was particularly violent in the vicinity of Fleury. The French did not succeed in regaining possession of the Thiaumont works.

More than six German divisions participated in the offensive action east of the Meuse yesterday.

Repulse Slow Advance.

Berlin, June 24.—German troops yesterday repulsed attacks of the Russians to advance south of Minsk and north of Wlady in the Dvinsk sector, according to an official statement.

NORTHWESTERN RY. HEEDS TO DEMANDS FOR MORNING TRAIN

Will Start Schedule Monday Morning, Leaving Here Daily Except Sunday at 7:10 A. M.

Complaints registered Monday by the Janesville Commercial club to the Chicago and Northwestern railway in relation to the abandonment of the "commutation train" were evidently well placed. Announcement made this morning by the passenger department gives Janesville a train in substitution for the one pulled off. In reality, it is just the accommodation the city has looked for and which suggestion was advanced by the directors of the Commercial club on Monday when they were in conference with J. L. Frazier, assistant general passenger and ticket agent and G. W. Bailey, superintendent of the Wisconsin Division.

The new schedule will be effective Monday morning. The train will depart from Janesville at 7:10 a. m. daily except Sunday. It will arrive in Chicago at 9:45 a. m. Monday morning.

The new morning schedule is received with general satisfaction by Janesville people accustomed to using the C. & N. W.

NEW FIRE RISK RATE FAVORS JANESVILLE

City Will See Decrease in Insurance on Dwellings.—Reductions Throughout Wisconsin.

New schedules issued by the Wisconsin inspection bureau and to be effective July 1, make a material decrease in fire insurance rates on dwellings in Wisconsin. The reduction will be from seventeen to thirty percent for all companies doing business in the state. These rates apply to cities from the first and including the fifth classes.

The following schedule, for the three year period, has been arranged by the Wisconsin bureau:

| Brick with metal roof, per | Rate | Old | New |
|------------------------------|-------|-------|-------|
| Brick with shingle roof, per | 50.00 | 50.00 | 45.00 |
| Frame with metal roof, per | 45.00 | 45.00 | 40.00 |
| Frame with shingle roof, per | 40.00 | 40.00 | 35.00 |

With the issuing of the new rates Wisconsin dwelling insurance has been brought down to a more scientific standpoint than ever before. Under the new order barn rates are a little in excess of residences, but the difference is a minimum. This basis is necessary because of the fire hazard to be found in the barn than in the house. Insurance companies for many years have realized that the barn was a greater risk than the residence, but always before the same rate was charged for one as for the other.

For small towns with fire protection from water mains, classes 4 and 5, the schedule on $100 is as follows:

| Brick with metal roof, per | Rate | Old | New |
|------------------------------|-------|-------|-------|
| Brick with shingle roof, per | 50.00 | 50.00 | 45.00 |
| Frame with metal roof, per | 45.00 | 45.00 | 40.00 |
| Frame with shingle roof, per | 40.00 | 40.00 | 35.00 |

There are 235 cities in the state that come under this classification. For all the cities and villages in the state that have the so-called "bucket-brigade" protection, not water-main, the reduction is smaller. Where the water is 60 to 70 cents for the same classes of dwellings as in other cities, they will now be 50, 60, 60, and 70 cents per hundred.

Other than rules do not affect other than dwellings, most but not houses have to take out fire protection under a one year policy. The one year rate for dwellings in towns like Madison, La Crosse and other second class cities, is 10 to 22 cents. Very few property owners ever use the one year term, however. The five year rate per hundred is 88 cents, a reduction from the $1.05 rate now in existence.

The new rates, local insurance men state, only pertain to policies written after July 1, no rebate or reduction being given on insurance written before this date.

MEXICAN WAR HAS BROUGHT A TANGLE

T. F. Madden, Former Janesville Resident, Dead at El Paso and Complications Arise Over Estate.

T. F. Madden, a former Janesville resident and a brother of Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Ed. Welch of this city, is dead at El Paso and serious complications have arisen over the payment of his life insurance in the O. R. C. It appears that Madden was employed as a railroad conductor on the Mexican Central road and was a member of the Mexico City lodge of O. R. C. When the present internal disturbances started in Mexico, he left and went to El Paso. Later he was taken sick and died. Previous to his death it is alleged that a man named Woodward secured Madden's signature to his insurance policy. Since his death the claim has not been paid and the El Paso lodge is awaiting the outcome of the controversy as to whether it belongs to Woodward or the Janesville lodge. It is expected Madden's remains will be shipped here for interment.

MANY PEOPLE TRAVELING CROWDS THROUG DEPOSITS THROUGHOUT THIS MORNING

"It's a great morning for a crowd of dips to work," remarked Officer Harry Smith at the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway passenger depot this morning after observing the great crowds which thronged the station platform. Today was really the first big morning of the season at the local station. All trains into and out of Janesville were crowded to capacity with people off for the lakes on week-end outings and many just beginning their vacations. After the trains had departed, however, no reports of the skill of the light-fingered gentry were reported. Northwestern passenger trains similarly were filled to capacity.

A BOYS' DRUM CORPS IS BEING ORGANIZED

Next Meeting Is Monday Evening at 7:30.—H. M. Weaver Will Be Present to Instruct Boy Musicians.
Interest in the formation of a drum corps in the city is being displayed and on Thursday evening, last, eight youngsters, drummers and one cornet player took part in the rehearsal at the Gazette office. H. S. Gurnums gave the members instruction in marching and handling their drums and the boys' rehearsal proved that the youthful drummers Janesville has the nucleus of a first class organization.

The next meeting will be held on Monday evening at 7:30, at which time it is hoped that all boys with drums, and buglers, or cornet players, will be present so the organization can be perfected.
Those who have thus far formed the organization are: John Ford, Clem Jackman, Howard Gage, David Holmes, Sylvester Luby, Francis Croak, Will Korst and Edmund Waters, drums, and Francis Denning, cornet. A list is being made of the names of more buglers or cornet players. Bugles have been obtained so that anyone that can play and has no instrument can be supplied. H. S. Gurnums will also be present.

H. M. Weaver, a civil war veteran, who saw long service in the 1st and 2nd regiments of the 1st Iowa and 2nd Iowa regiments, will be present to give the boys instruction in genuine martial music. Just as I was playing when the life and drum corps inspired the soldier boys of '76, the men of 1812, and the fighting forces of '61. Mr. Weaver has kindly consented to devote some time to the boys and it is hoped all will be prompt and be present at 7:30 sharp.

CALL TO ARMS FINDS THIS NATION ALERT

COUNTRY OVER AS NATIONAL GUARD IS MOBILIZED

NEED MORE ECONOMY

With War Threatened and the Excesses of War Imminent, Retrenchment Should be Practiced
by Individuals and State

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, June 24.—The calling of the National guard of the country has been the supreme event of the day. Instantly the president fixed upon a situation the gravity of which had not been fully realized. It was a war might be forced upon the United States. The spirit with which the call has met response is evidence that the country is awake and alert. Only here and there has a false note been struck, as in the case of our Milwaukee Socialist mayor, who seemed to politics, and apparently does not know the president of the United States is commander-in-chief of the army and navy.

But the mayor should not be taken too seriously. He is in common with the rest of us, are likely to learn better our troops come out of Mexico. It is not a political campaign that is on there, and that President Wilson is president of the United States and not merely of the Democratic party. Just now that are about as important a lot of "outlet anglers" that ever waited for him to be kind enough to make his debut on the scene with warm weather.

Wisconsin abounds in lakes and streams, the sanctuaries of several species of the finny tribe, and each week-end sees the interurban trains leaving Milwaukee well filled with Isaac Watsons, young and old, large and small. Each Sunday evening sees them return with poles and baskets and a new coat of tan. But where are the fish? There are none in the baskets. Has he really been fishing, or didn't they bite? Unfortunately the lakes accessible to the majority of Milwaukeeans are not the best of fishing grounds. But that matters not. Approach the Sunday fisherman during a week day and he will always be able to tell you about "that string" he had Sunday. It is a day alone, spent in silent reverie, in the fresh air and sunshine, that is his idea of "the life." It also supplies winter pastime, for he will spend many reminiscence hours recalling those happy fishing days, and when approached at such times will always tell you a fish story that you will be slow to follow by gulps. So hush up, Sol, or our supply of winter fireside stories will fall short this year.

Milwaukee's Prepare Parade.

The spirit of Milwaukee will come to the surface on July 15, when, under the auspices of the state branch of the Security League it is proposed to have a parade for preparedness. The mobilization of state troops, the rush of recruits to fill up the Wisconsin requirements to full war quota, and the anxiety of Milwaukee to show its metal, all co-operate to promise the greatest parade of men and women Wisconsin ever saw. Already there is evidence that thousands will turn out and that there will be not merely enthusiasm but deep seriousness behind the movement. Those in charge already talk confidently of a procession of 20,000 strong and it may exceed that. This is not loose talk. Nearly 10,000 have already signified their intention and it is, so far, just preliminary talk. Headquarters are just opened. Things will be in full swing next week. Politics of the partisan sort are going on to the dump very fast this season.

Speaking of politics, this is going to be a year for patriots, not for partisans. The little issues of small politics and small people will get no heed. There will be real things for real men to do all the time, and such emergencies of ways being found to the surface. Wisconsin has shown up badly in congress, but for Paul Hastings we would be unrepresented; but what has just happened to Moses Clapp in Minnesota ought to happen to every Wisconsin representative and to our senior senator, and I have no doubt it will. Clapp made a bad third in the Minnesota senatorial primary. W. C. Jeffris has made his first speech and there is at least one criticism to be made on it. In his space devoted to his opponent he should have remembered the old injunction to speak kindly of the dead. There are a lot of important things to talk about but the people are thinking of only one—their country.

Keep Down Expenditures.

In the face of huge expenses for war that are coming fast, it is well for thoughtful people to realize that taxes and living costs will be higher and will keep rising until everybody will feel them. The taxing authorities of Wisconsin, from the farm to the city government, should bear in mind the importance of keeping down need-less expenditures. I heard a prominent real estate man complaining this week that laboring people will not invest in land because taxes are so high, and he has lots in several cities. Millions of outlay for war will hit every man's pocketbook, big or small, so prudence and forethought may be very useful.

The week-end call to arms of Isaac Watson's disciples has been rather feeble this year. So far Old Sol has given Milwaukee's army of "Watchful Waiters" a real opportunity to test their patience. Just now that are about as important a lot of "outlet anglers" that ever waited for him to be kind enough to make his debut on the scene with warm weather.

"Eat" on the Erie.

In the last number of the Erie Railroad Magazine there is a story of dining car progress, or retrogression, as it may be termed in some respects, that is certainly interesting. Somebody has "dine up" an old menu of the days of 1875, when the Erie ran "Pullman's Palace Hotel Coaches." It is remarkable that despite present day high costs of food and service many salubrious are served at lower prices now than they were 40 years ago. Then sirloin steak, that 40 years ago sold for 50 cents. They are only 60 cents today, and are undoubtedly much better, for the packers have raised the average quality of meats greatly. Lamb chops were about the same as sirloin steaks. Oysters were 40 to 50 cents; now they sell for 25 and 30. Eggs were as high then as now and they cost three or four times as much now. But the thing that makes one realize the change most is the game on the menu. "Prairie chicken, 30c." "Pheasant, $1.00." "Quail on toast, 75 cents." "Blue-winged teal, 75 cents;" and woodcock, golden plover and "venison steak with jelly." These are dainties not to be had today at any price. But the Erie still sets a good table and at very reasonable figures.

This country has been building and buying ships at a rate that looks rapid compared with the past. In the twelve months ending June 30, 1915, we built 122 ships and admitted 148 foreign built ships to American registry. This year up to June we had built 507 and admitted 34. The total increase in our merchant fleet since the beginning of July, 1914, is 2,312 ships of 1,058,566 tons, total. The greater part of this fleet for service on the lakes and in coastwise trade. Our share in foreign commerce is still small.

English newspapers have had to reduce their size and some have closed shop because paper is so high in price and difficult to get. Newspapers in this country have also begun to feel the effect on high paper prices quite seriously.

Wisconsin is mobilizing nearly 5,000 men, the largest number in its history, except at civil war time.

On Thursday evening an informal gathering of the deaf of the city and vicinity was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Robinson on the Institute hill, twenty-eight adults and nine children being present. The event was in honor of Professor J. W. Swiler of Burlington, Ia., who was for twenty years superintendent of the Wisconsin School for the Deaf and who was in Delavan attending home coming.

Nothing furnishes Mr. Swiler more pleasure than the meeting of his old pupils in social intercourse, being an adept in their means of communication. The sign language which he firmly believes cannot be left out as a means in educating the deaf without retarding their mental development. Before the breaking up of the company at a late hour punch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Swiler leave for home today, going overland by automobile.

Temperance Talk

Facts for Tax Payers. No-License Pays.

The average tax payer has not the time to figure out for himself the increased tax burden caused by the saloons in his community. In a general way most every one understands that the money raised from license does not compensate for the increased expense brought about as a direct result of the saloon. This expense arises because of the increased cost of the police department, courts, jails, almshouses, and the fact that the community is drained of a large amount of money spent annually for drink. In that way many towns as well as individuals are kept in a state of chronic impoverishment.

The No-License league of Boston has gathered statistics from the State of Massachusetts, covering a period of twenty-five years. These statistics were based upon official figures, and in all cities where the average tax rate was the same the no-license cities had the following advantage over the license cities:

Had 8 per cent. smaller debt.

Spent 22 per cent. less for police.

Spent 48 per cent. less for poverty.

Spent 25 per cent. more for good streets.

Spent 41 per cent. more for education.

Increased 66 per cent. more in taxable property.

Increased 79 per cent. more in industry.

Increased 90 per cent. more in population.

Secretary Nowlan Has Closed Contract With Native Singers.—To Get Eight Bands.—Ball Game
on Wednesday.

JANESVILLE FAIR DATES.
August 8, 9, 10 and 11, 1916.

A quarrel of Hawaiian singers will be one of the big features at the Janesville fair this fall. After negotiations extending over the past three months, Secretary Harry O. Nowlan was able to report to the board at their last meeting that he was finally able to make a contract with the island musicians. Shortly after the first of the year the attention of the fair board was called to these singers who were touring the United States. They were making a decided hit on a big vaudeville circuit and when featured at various other entertainments. Secretary Nowlan got in communication with them and learned that at that time they were under contract but received the assurance that when this ended they would be glad to consider the Janesville proposition, providing the dates and routes could be made so as to include this city in the itinerary without being a serious handicap to their other engagements. A letter from their manager recently stated that if the Janesville fair board still desired their appearance here, it would be possible to make a contract. Secretary Nowlan immediately signed them up.

Another big feature the board is at present considering is the securing of a lady soloist during the final three days of the fair. If the person in particular can be secured her singing, in band accompaniment, will be a decided hit, as she is a musician of national and state reputation. The board authorized Secretary Nowlan to contract for another band if he thought this necessary. Thus far seven bands have been secured, one for the opening day and then two each for successive days. Today Secretary Nowlan was considering the hiring of the Spring Valley organization, a band that is rated among the best in southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois.

Efforts are being made for the securing of the Whitewater and Fort Atkinson city baseball teams for a game at the park on Wednesday afternoon. It is hoped that these aggregations can be brought together, which is an early season dispute as to which is the better organization. Both teams have made claims that only a game can decide.

Beware the Gossypol!

Before cottonseed can become a suitable food for human beings, the gossypol it contains must be extracted or neutralized. For gossypol is a poison. Stock raisers in the cotton districts know how cottonseed meal often poisons their animals. Gossypol is a substance allied to carbolic acid, but its chemistry is unknown. W. A. Withers and F. E. Carruth, in a report in the Journal of Agricultural Research, prove it is gossypol that causes the poisoning.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

We find plenty of doctors who are sick, and have no difficulty in pointing out lawyers who are lawless. Some of the worst-dressed people are tailors and dressmakers. There are dentists who have pyorrhea alveolaris, and veterinarians whose horses are laid up with the heaves, spavins and hemiplegic paraparesis. Promoters of hair restorers are usually bald. Even ministers have been known to do things forbidden by the Decalogue. And so we should expect, as a matter of course, to find many men who constantly espouse truth, but who rarely express it. The truthful man lives truth, but does not discuss it. It is as unbecomingly and unbecomingly as a host of his truthfulness as for a woman to boast of her chastity. Truth is seated in the heart and not in the mouth. Our finest attributes are silent, still our neighbors recognize them, while our faults and sins are shouted to the world through our own speech.

This terse analysis of character is from the pen of "Bert Moses," who contributes an article every week to a trade journal under the title of "The Musings of Moses." He is an old advertising man, and his writings have to do with fakes and fakers, and he seldom fails to "strike twelve." The most of us are so long on profession and so short on possession, that the old command, "Thou shalt love thyself," comes to us with much force as when it was first written. The egotism of many of us is so pronounced that we feel competent to utter the last word on almost any proposition, and we do not take kindly to criticism.

The Mayo brothers' hospital at Rochester, Minn., is a popular resort for physicians from all parts of the country. A week or two in attendance at the clinic—where from a dozen to twenty operations are performed every morning—is considered a valuable education.

A fine also a country doctor was present with fifty others, when one of the Mayors was operating on a soldier. He said to a friend as he watched the skillful operator, "That isn't the way I would do it," and then went on to expound his methods.

That is a sample of sublime egotism. The great hospital, one of the most noted in the country, enjoys an enviable reputation for success, and the two men who have made it, are so modest that they never boast of achievement.

The Wisconsin law of eugenics, for which egotism is largely responsible, is being made the butt of much ridicule and results in some embarrassing situations. A young man from Evansville took his best girl from Chicago to Woodstock, the other day, to be married.

The county clerk informed him that a license could not be issued without a certificate of health from a Wisconsin physician, and so a day was spent in chasing over the country to find a doctor who would accommodate him with the necessary documents, and a preacher who would waive the time limit clause and tie the knot in short order. Both were finally found in a little town near the state line, and the couple were made happy.

Here is a little story which recently appeared in the Chicago Daily News, which has to do with sanitation, another feature of present day reform. "Reggie" is starting for school and his fond mother, who has sanitation on the brain, loads him up with admonitions.

"Now it's time for you to start for school, Reggie, darling. Good-by. No, don't kiss me! How many times must I tell you kissing is unsanitary?"

"Oh, child, how could you pat the dog? Now we must sterilize your hands all over again and steam them and then use the antiseptic spray on them. There! Now, here are your antiseptic gloves. Get your hands into them quickly."

"And here's your individual car strap. Be careful not to touch any other."

"Have those shoes been baked since you wore them yesterday? No? Then you must change them. Here's another pair, just out of the oven. And here's your state, dearie. It's been well boiled and afterward baked."

"Now, remember, put on your rubber gloves when working at the blackboard and use your own piece of drink from, and here's the antiseptic spray to use on your desk."

"And here are two cubes of germicide and a vaporizer; gargle every even hour from this bottle and sniff this one every odd hour.

"Here's your doctor's certificate in his antiseptic case. Show it to the teacher if he insists on cutting out your tonsils again, and tell him I'm sure your adenoids have not grown again since your operation last week."

"Now, run along, dearie. Don't breathe when the wind is blowing or any dust flying or any people passing. Don't breathe at all if you can help it."

"Good-by. No, don't touch mother's hand—just wave a farewell. But wave away from yourself, not toward you."

It is so much easier to talk than it is to do, so much easier to advise than it is to perform, that many of us are good talkers and advisers, but poor performers. We are inclined to forget that people judge us by what we do and not by what we say.

Moses gives expression to a great thought when he says that "truth is seated in the heart and not in the mouth."

The notion generally prevails that the brain does the thinking and the mind directs the thought, but the impulses which govern, spring from the heart, and the old bible statement always holds true, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

The cheapest thing in the world is a profession, because it is a product of the mouth. It is too often an advertisement not backed up with the goods, and amounts to a fake pure and simple. The man who advertises his wealth is seldom a wealthy man, and the man who claims to be honest will usually bear watching.

A profession of faith is considered sacred, yet it amounts to nothing unless backed by possession of the Christian graces. The long prayer and exhortation may be nothing but words, unless the every day life inspires confidence.

This is just as true of knowledge. The people who do things never talk about what they can do. They simply go about their work quietly and obtain results. The industrial world is full of this kind of people. Men and women who have become expert artisans through experience.

There is but little chance for sham in a busy avenue, and while time serves, are sometimes in evidence, they are soon discovered and weeded out.

Society, business and the professions are where the fakers flourish. These avenues are crowded with people who are not always what they seem. Many of them are consumed with an ambition to get something for nothing, and the methods employed are often questionable.

It is an old truism, too often overlooked, that none of us get out of life more than we put into it. The scheme of existence is a scheme of investment and the choicest rewards come to the heaviest investors.

The people who fail, whether in health, in business, or in morals, can usually trace their failure to lack of investment. They neglected to fortify themselves for the strain of experience, and so went down before the blast of sudden temptation or untoward circumstances. There was a weak link in the chain.

The most sacred spot on earth is the home. It should be as free from sham as a fakes as paradise. The expressions of love and sympathy should be spontaneous, and loving deeds, not words, should be the medium.

The simple statement, "I love you," means nothing to the tired wife, unless it is emphasized by care and thoughtful consideration, and the kiss of affection is a travesty to the worried husband, when the home is neglected.

There will be more happy homes, when men and women possess in larger degree the love which they profess, and honesty will be a prevailing virtue when all of us are more careful to be what we seem.

To him rushed a young lady in a pale pink pique gown.
"Oh, tell me," she cried, "did you do this wonderful picture?"
The young man smirked incriminately.

"I did all the pictures in this particular room," he replied.
"Oh, what a genius! And how modest of you to put it in that way! But stay—how is it that different names are signed to these?"
"Oh, that!" replied the artist contemptuously. "That merely means the canvases. I am the academy's frame glider."

LICENSE VOTE CASE COMES UP TUESDAY

Hearing Will Be Held in Whitewater on Election Case Whether City Is Wet or Dry.

Whitewater, June 24.—There will be a hearing in the case of state ex rel. Ed. Schneider vs. city of Whitewater at 10 o'clock before Judge Belden at Elkhorn next Tuesday, the 27th inst.

This is the case which involves the validity of the special election held April 4 last in the city of Whitewater to determine whether or not licenses to sell intoxicating liquors should be granted. Judge Belden has directed the mayor and common council and present. He has ordered that the county clerk produce the defective and challenged ballots and the returns or statements of the inspectors of election. He has also ordered that they may be inspected by him and the city officials.

The citizens of Whitewater generally are pleased at Judge Belden's determination to investigate this election. There were apparently many irregularities and violations of the election laws, and he seems determined to arrive at the truth. Some objections have been placed in his way, but he is brushing them aside, one by one, and the end of the controversy seems to be near.

SECOND COMPLAINT ON CLINTON TROUBLE

Lerner Causes Arrest of Hugh Bennett for Assault and Battery—Trouble Over Alleged Rioting.

On the complaint of Morris Lerner, a second-hand dealer of Clinton, Hugh Bennett was arraigned before Judge H. L. Maxfield in the municipal court this morning on the charge of assault and battery. The arrest and prosecution of Bennett is the result of trouble over the alleged theft of brass and rubber from Lerner, on the sixth of this month.

Bennett entered a plea of abatement through his attorney. This is to the effect that there is a similar case pending in court, on which the outcome of the last action is somewhat uncertain. His case was set over until June 27th, and the defendant was released in the custody of Sheriff A. O. Chamberlain, who made the arrest.

Clinton is aroused over the case, and according to the attorneys in the action the citizens are sharply divided in their sentiments in the court cases brought by Lerner. It appears that the rubbers and brass were taken from the barn storehouse during the night of the sixth. Some days afterward Guy Fredendall, the alleged thief, was found a sack containing the alleged stolen property in an alley in Clinton.

He reported his find to George "Push" Bennett, who is known in Janesville as a baseball player. Miller then suggested the sale of the property, and both Fredendall and Miller declared that they did not know the material was stolen.

The best part of the trouble is that Fredendall took the brass to Lerner to make the sale. Lerner did not identify the loot, but when Miller showed up to sell the rubbers, his suspicion was aroused. He questioned Miller and on learning the facts, caused the arrest of Fredendall in the municipal court here on the charge of burglary and larceny. Fredendall pleaded not guilty and his case was set for the twenty-sixth for a hearing.

It is further alleged that a number of Clinton young men went to the place where Lerner lodged and during the night called him from his bed. Lerner went out and it is claimed that the group of indignant citizens showed up to sell the rubbers, his suspicion was aroused. He questioned Miller and on learning the facts, caused the arrest of Fredendall in the municipal court here on the charge of burglary and larceny. Fredendall pleaded not guilty and his case was set for the twenty-sixth for a hearing.

It is also said that the alleged rioting and dispute had an indirect effect on the refusal of the Clinton officials to issue liquor licenses. So sharply have the lines been drawn by the citizens and so far has the trouble gone, that the principals will not be content without a costly lawsuit.

FARM MANAGEMENT STUDENTS WILL CAMP NEAR BELCOT
A corps of students enrolled in the farm management contest, a six weeks' course which is to be given under the auspices of the state college of agriculture beginning with Monday, June 26, will be camped near Belcot for at least a portion of the term in order to study several up-to-date Rock county farms at close range. Two other camps will be located, one at Rosendale, Fond du Lac county, and the other at Bethesda Station, Waukesha county. The majority of students in this course are graduates of agricultural colleges, or are advanced students in agriculture. There will also be several members of the agricultural college faculties from Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota and Illinois.

MAILS IN ALASKA TO GO BY AIRSHIP

Airship mail routes in Alaska.

The most difficult mail routes in Alaska are to be taken care of by aeroplanes. This will result not only in a saving to Uncle Sam, but in a much improved mail service to the Alaskans.

He Wasn't Sinning.
Little Bobbie, six years old, had been in the orphan's home but a few days when the cook was baking pies. Watching his opportunity, he stole one, and hid himself away while eating it. Being missed, a search soon found him with part of the stolen goods in his hands. He was taken to the superintendent's office to receive punishment for his misdemeanor. When asked why he stole the pie, he replied, "Why, didn't you read at morning prayers, that man should not live by bread alone?" He was not punished.

His Business.

Window dressing as an art some times enlists the aid of humorists, says the New York Evening Post. One such found it incumbent upon him to make the window of a cigar shop in Liberty street conspicuous the other day. He took a capacious cigar box filled it with nondescript cheroots of the genus Wagle, placed it in the window, and added this sign: "I Can't Enough Said."

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

OF DAISY DEAN

News Notes of Movieland. Adelaide Woods, known among patrons of the screen through her portrayal of character leads, has been engaged to appear in important roles. Miss Woods has appeared on the screen some three years. Her latest work on the screen was evidenced in "Paths That Crossed," in which she scored a personal triumph. Preceding her addition with motion pictures Miss Woods played on the concert stage in many successes for four years.

SCENIC BEAUTIES OF CANADA TO BE FILMED. The scenic beauties of Canada from Nova Scotia to British Columbia and from the Georgian Bay country to the Yukon will be filmed by several squads of camera men during the summer months.

Great preparations are being made for the Yukon pictures. Animal life in this great north country will be given as much attention as scenic studies and the camera staff has orders to get a series which will show how polar bears live. A thorough will be the canvass of this country for appropriate scenery and animal studies that the party is not expected to return until late in August or September.

The photographers will work westward to Vancouver through the Canadian Rockies and then take a boat for the north country, making a long snow trip inland and later working north by dog sled to the habitat of the polar bear, the walrus and seal.

Christodora, an Italian-American sculptor, has recently completed the full-length figure of William Hart, the star, on which he has been working for three months. Mr. Hart is said to be very much pleased with the statue.

Miss Petrova brought a parrot back with her from the Bermudas. It talks Spanish and she fears it is smart. Fortunately, she says, she does not understand much Spanish.

Stuart Holmes, the movie villain, says "I have always been a mystery to the why can't manufacturers don't put handles on the bottoms of canoes so there will be something to hang to when the canoes capsize."

Adelaide Woods.

As Mrs. Cleave in "The American Beauty," a drama starring Myrtle Stedman, she will make her initial appearance on the program the last of this month. In this character she is given a particularly difficult part.

Amusements

(Notices furnished by the theatres.)

AT THE APOLLO. Geraldine Farrar in "Maria Rosa" opera prima donna and noted grand opera star of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company, will appear at the Apollo on Wednesday in "Maria Rosa," said by those who have seen her to be the best of the three photo-plays she has made for the Lasky company, the others being "Carmen" and "Temptation." Like the others, "Maria Rosa" was produced by Cecil B. DeMille. Wallace Reid appears in the leading masculine role.

These are facts of exceptional interest in connection with Miss Farrar in "Maria Rosa," as it was during the making of this photoplay that she met and fell in love with Mr. Lou Tellegen, who she recently married. Three years ago when Mr. Lou Tellegen came to the United States to make his debut on the American stage as an English speaking actor, he chose as his first play, "Maria Rosa." Previously the young actor had appeared for two seasons in American tours as leading man with Mme. Sara Bernhardt.

AT THE APOLLO. Pauline Frederick Electrifies in "The Moment Before."

Those who have seen Pauline Frederick in "Zaza," "The Spider," and "Audrey," and her numerous other notable screen successes will welcome her as Madge, a charming, alluring gypsy girl, and the central character of Israel Zangwill's remarkable drama, "The Moment Before," appearing at the Apollo on Monday, giving Miss Frederick the opportunity of revealing another true to life character to the motion picture public. As the plot is laid in England, with a large part of the action occurring in Australia, R. G. Vignola, the director, showed remarkable judgment in selecting Florida as the setting for this latest Famous Players-Paramount photo-drama.

AT THE APOLLO. Sessue Hayakawa in "Alien Souls" Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Japanese actor, will be seen at the Apollo on Tuesday in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "Alien Souls," a thrilling melodrama written especially for him by Hector Turnbull, author of "The Cheat" in which play Hayakawa established himself as one of the most distinguished actors of the day. It is a Paramount attraction.

wealth. Details of the conspiracy aim to abduct the millionaire, and keep him safely out of finance until a certain transaction is put over. Quite by chance, Fairbanks finds himself involved in this plot, and defeats it in a highly ingenious as well as athletic manner.

EUROPEANS NOW LOOK UPON WAR AS NORMAL CONDITION

Vienna, June 24.—The general state of belligerency Europe has not only modified the material course of life, but has had such an influence on the psychology of the public that after two years, a state of war has become an almost normal condition, according to a woman contributor to a prominent Polish newspaper. The constant presence of the thought that war is the great condition of the day, and to win it, the prime objective, has in the course of the past few years given a secondary place to the interests of the masses, she said, so that now the loss of relatives on the battlefield is no longer associated with the self of a person but with the will of a aggregate to win. For this also sacrifice of a material nature are made, whose rendering no other cause or demand could hope to achieve.

While the war is not as yet looked upon exactly as a normal state in which a continent ought to find itself, there is a striking stoic indifference about it, in many respects. There is of course still a keen desire that peace may come soon, but coupled to it inseparably is a grim determination to show that the Central Group power cannot be effaced.

Five weather and reassuring crop reports from all parts of the empire have served to heighten the impression here that the Vienna and Budapest are close to their habitual tendency to look upon life as a thing to be enjoyed to the full, even if bread tickets and two meatless days per week must be taken into account. This has gone so far as to cause the resurrection of a ninety-year-old French opera, and permit a merry interest in the presenting to a favorite slinger by an admirer of a parrot made of solid gold. The precious bird is life size and was handed over the footlights.

For two years everybody has been preaching the gospel that one must die once anyway, and that a little sooner or later does not make a great difference. Association with this idea has been a blessing to many, and its reiteration has had its effect upon the psychology of the masses, so that today it is accepted as an obvious inevitability to meet death on the firing line. The condition in question is said by some to have strong similarity to the views held in the ancient world on human sacrifices when these were the practice and when its victims were drawn from the population when other sources failed.

GREATER PART OF ITALIAN ARMY HAS VISITED AMERICA

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Rome, June 24.—The number of present Italian soldiers who have either been to the United States or else have relatives there is estimated as high as 500,000, a proportion that is said to be larger in this respect than that of any other army in Europe. Everywhere on the Italian front the American visitor finds men who have been to the United States, and they usually seem proud of the fact. On a recent visit to the war zone, a correspondent was trying to get a train for Oregon via the Pacific coast, and he was asked one of the soldiers-police for some necessary information. "I don't know anything about this town, I'm from New York," replied the carabinieri.

Worse Luck! Men who are too lazy to work and too proud to beg are usually too indifferent to die.—Judge.

Children's Serial Story

THE NERVES OF COLUMBUS ROYCE.

By Paul Holmes.

Said Harold: "Winsor, if you could have anything in the whole world that you wanted, what would you want?"

The two boys were seated upon Winsor's back porch. It was the first day of vacation, and they were in a mood to have a little fun. They had talked over everything of importance that had happened in the past school year, and everything that might happen in the school year to come.

"I'd like an auto," said he. "A great big one, with electric lights and twelve cylinders and about a hundred horse power."

"Gee, said I," cried Harold, with enthusiasm. "Mine would be a great big one with a top and sides with windows in 'em. And I'd have the nicest horn that could be made on 'em, and I'd sit back in the big seat and run through town at about a hundred miles an hour."

"Would be the greatest fun in the whole world," said Winsor, and he meant it. "But I've teased my dad and teased him, and he only says, 'Humph, what are you want of an auto? You couldn't run one.'"

"My dad's the same way only worse," Harold grumbled. He says, 'Look at the price of gasoline. If you'll buy all the gasoline I'll see that you get a car quick enough. It costs just about ten cents a mile to run a car nowadays.'"

"Look at Cleveland Hunter," muttered Winsor. "His dad ain't a bit richer than we are, but he's got a flivver, and he says his dad lets him run it some times. And if they can have an auto we ought to be able to too."

"We could, but my dad is so mean he don't want me to have any fun at all," said Harold vindictively. "If he knew how glad it would make a guy to have an auto I bet he'd get one."

"Even Splinter's got a little one," said Winsor. "I wonder if he'd sell it to me. I've asked him and had enough money."

"I bet he would," cried Harold. "He doesn't run it much any more. How much money have you got?"

"I've got eight cents," said Winsor. "beside the dollar and a half I got in the bank. Do you suppose that will be enough?"

"I dunno," said Harold. "I got two dollars and thirty-six cents in the bank, and seven cents at home. If I put it all together we ought to be able to buy it. And if we did, waw! That little machine can go some, and all the kids in town would wish they could have one."

"Let's go and see Splinter, and buy it right away," suggested Winsor. "Wouldn't our dad be surprised if we rode home in it, and honked the horn from the road, for them to come out and see it?"

The two boys arose from their positions on the porch and prepared to start in search of Splinter. The auto which Splinter was in possession of was one which that youth had made the summer before with an old motorboat engine and various odds and ends which he had collected in different places. By incessant tinkering, an old car had been made to run, and Splinter had managed to keep it in a state of repair, though he did not foresee exactly what it might do. Perhaps the steering gear would balk, or perhaps nothing worse than a blowout would occur.

But Winsor and Harold did not reach Splinter's house that morning. They had hardly left the porch, when a brand new auto, with a loud honk coming down the street, made its appearance.

"Gee," Winsor gasped. "Look at that. That's the kind of an auto I'm going to get when I get one. 'Whose is it do you suppose?' asked Harold.

But before Winsor could attempt an answer, the car slowed down, and then turned into the driveway of their next door neighbor's, Mr. Columbus Royce's.

"Wow," gasped Harold. "What'dye think of that? That old geezer hasn't bought a new one, has he?"

"He couldn't have," muttered Winsor. "He's too stingy to buy a wheelbarrow. But who do you suppose it is?"

"Somebody to see old Royce, I suppose," Harold ventured.

"There's Royce himself in the front seat," Winsor cried suddenly.

"Gee, he is," admitted Harold. "Do you really suppose it's his?"

"Jimminy," murmured Harold. "If it is, I wish we hadn't been so mean to him. He won't let us ride in it now."

"It can't be his," said Winsor. "Where'd he get money enough to buy a big auto like that? An if it is, I wouldn't ride in the old thing for a million dollars."

Notwithstanding this assertion, Winsor was burning with envy, and he was making several vain regrets because he had been such an enemy of Columbus's. If the car really was Mr. Royce's, he could never have a ride in it, because Mr. Royce would not permit the one who had broken his window to ride with him.

"What'd we want to be so mean to old Columbus for?" demanded Harold.

"If we'd known he was going to get an auto, we wouldn't've," mourned Winsor. "But then," he brightened, "maybe it ain't his."

The auto had stopped in front of Mr. Columbus Royce's barn, and the boys were able to see that only two persons were in it. One was Mr. Royce, and the other was a person whom they had never seen before. As this person wore goggles and goggles, and was the driver, the boys concluded that the auto was the property of their enemy, and that the other person was an engaged to teach him how to run it.

"Gee, I bet it is his," Harold muttered. "The ole 'boob.' Do you suppose he thinks he is going to run that all the time, right by us, and we can't have any rides in it?"

"Let's go tell him we ain't mad at him any more," suggested Winsor.

"He's more made at me than he is at you."

"I'm afraid to," confessed Winsor. "Let's walk down that way and look at it and see what kind of a thing it is. Their way to ride on 'let us.'"

"We can try it," said Harold dubiously, "but he ain't that kind of a guy."

Accordingly they walked slowly down the street, toward the auto. The closer they got to it, the bigger and finer it seemed. The cushions in the front seat looked inviting and as Winsor gazed at the big steering wheel, he decided that if he could only run that car once, just once, he would never wish for anything else in the whole world.

Mr. Columbus Royce was talking to the driver. "Well, Mr. Iverson," he squeaked, "how long do you suppose 'I'll be afore I kin run 'er'?"

"I don't know," the driver replied, "a bit cautiously. 'You're comin' along pretty good, but there's one big you can control your nerves. You won't make a very fine auto driver. Now when I was trying to avoid that mud hole back there, you got nervous and if I hadn't grabbed the wheel, you'd have run the car into the ditch, and broke her all up. I don't think there'll be much difficulty in your learning the mechanical work, but you've got to keep your head with you, one like'll be a wreck."

"Humph," sniffed Mr. Royce. "I do be pretty nervous, I know, but I guess if I ever learn to run this ole shebang, I'll take all the nerves out of me I ever had. I think that a little practice will get me used to it, and then it will be all right."

"Perhaps," Mr. Iverson admitted, "but you've got to be careful, and try hard. You're a pretty old man to learn to drive an auto."

Winsor and Harold were magnetized like needles and the auto was the magnet. Try as hard as they might, they could not get away from it, but all the time were edging closer and closer. Since a time long ago when Winsor's pitching arm had sent a green apple through Mr. Royce's kitchen window, it had been a forbidden thing for either boy to set foot upon any land belonging to Columbus. But now, this command was forgotten, and they pressed forward, eagerly. Winsor was the first to lay his hand upon the auto. He touched the fender cautiously, as if it were a sacred thing, and he might mar it.

Then Columbus turned and saw them. "Hyar, you kids," he exclaimed daintily. "You get away from my auto, and keep away do you understand? I want you to know. Mr. Thorngate, that I won't have any boys around, scratching my auto. Just keep right away."

Winsor recoiled to the sidewalk. Harold kicked at the hind tire, and followed Winsor. "Aly, we might get a teenweentle 'till scratch on his new auto," he squeaked, in remarkable imitation of Mr. Royce's high pitched voice. "We might even touch it."

"Who wants to touch his cheap old second hand pile of junk," sniffed Winsor in high disdain. "We'll let the poor old man enjoy his plaything in peace. Then the two boys fled. Mr. Royce pursued for a while, but stopped as he realized how much swifter they were than he. Mr. Iverson, the chauffeur, watched the scene with open mouth. Then as Mr. Royce returned, he laughed to himself. Two weeks later, Mr. Royce, who had spent all the time learning the art of auto-running, deemed himself capable of running his car, unassisted. He informed the chauffeur, Mr. Iverson, that he would no longer need his services. Then for the first time he tried to back the auto out of the barn. It was a harder task than he had expected. He neatly ran it off the cement approach to the barn, but at last he reached the road in safety. However, he was so excited and nervous that sweat was pouring off from his face.

Winsor and Harold, from a vantage point on the Thorngate lawn were witnesses of the performance. "The ole 'boob,'" grunted Winsor. "He could back somebody in the back seat just as well as not. I wish he would break the thing."

"I've got a scheme," Harold announced, suddenly. "Just wait till he comes back, and we'll get his goal. You know how nervous he is. We'll teach him to be so mean."

"What is it?" Winsor wanted to know, eagerly.

"Just this," said Harold. "Listen. Mr. Columbus Royce did not have an exceptionally good time in his initial tour. He compelled him to go slow and carefully. He nearly had convulsions every time he met an auto, and he almost hit a bicycle. When he returned home, he was ready for bed. He thought of the barn, and he remembered how nearly he had come to going off before. He brought the car into the driveway at the rate of five miles an hour, and started his snail like approach toward the barn. His hands shook as he mounted the cement platform. What if something should go wrong, and he should fall?"

"Now," whispered Harold. And then came two of the loudest shouts ever heard in the vicinity. Winsor and Harold put all their strength into them, and Mr. Royce thought someone was shooting cannon at him.

"Wow!" yelled Winsor, again. "Look. It worked." For Columbus Royce's car was entering the barn like a racer. The old man, in sudden fright had done the wrong thing. The next moment there was a splitting of boards, as the auto hit the other end of the barn. Then a crack.

At last Mr. Royce found the brake. He pulled the lever just in time to avoid utter demolition. The auto stopped with one wheel protruding from the broken boards. The whole end of the barn was in ruins.

"Maybe the Columbus won't be so mean again," cried Winsor in high glee. "He got just what he deserved."

"Served him just right, the ole stingy," seconded Harold, as the owner of the new auto emerged from the barn, shaking his fist at the machine inside, and telling himself that autos and boys were about alike. He had the cause of his misfortune.

CHAPTER IX.

THE dinner passed most agreeably, and when it was over Abner stood up at his place and made a tinkling sound with the point of his knife on an empty goblet, which gradually evoked silence on the gay company.

"Dear, dear! Speech, speech!" cried a lively talker, a man named Wilson, who was large, bald and had a crude wooden leg strapped to his knee and thigh and who, over the frank pseudonym of Peg Leg, wrote weekly letters from Danville noted for their cheerful philosophy.

This was followed by considerable applause, and Abner, bowing right and left, had to wait till it had abated before beginning.

"Ladies and gentlemen, brother and sister docters," he began, "as many of you may know, I ain't worth shucks at a speech. In fact, I don't know but what I would have backed plumb out of this whole affair of I had once thought a talk of any sort would be expected of me. It wasn't till you was all notified an' the New Clarion was full of accounts of this convention that Tom Sugart told me that the whole thing would fall as flat as a flitter if I didn't rise an' say something at least in the way of welcome."

"Good, good, hurrah for Tom!" exclaimed Peg Leg. "He not only knows how to git up a meal a mile long, but how to add on all the other up to date frills."

"Thank you, Brother Wilson," Abner smiled. "You put the words in my mouth an' exactly at the right place, for before you all I want right now to thank Sugart for his excellent service. If it hadn't been for Tom this would just 'a' been a common meal that we'd have been through with in ten minutes at the outside, but as you see we have set here constantly expectin' something to eat for fully two hours."

"And gettin' plenty too," Don't leave that out, Uncle Ab!" laughed the humorous interlocutor.

"Oh, yes, an' gettin' all that could be expected, an' even more," Abner grinned. "I would propose drinkin' Tom's health, but I notice that the wonderful concoction that Frank Raymond mixed up in the big bowl is gone completely. Even the ladies seemed to take to it. As far as I see, it ain't done any of us a bit of harm. I do not notice that our Brother Wilson, who passed his glass about as often as he could well manage it, is pretty lively, but for all I know that may be only natural."

"I noticed all of you down nigh his plate laughin' rather hearty, an' for the benefit of the folks up this way I will explain that the fun was all due to our brother meetin' with a little table accident. The most of us all acted with great wisdom an' consulted the bill to see what Tom had in the coffee cups for the first course, that looked like tea with grease floatin' on top, before we couched it, but Peg Leg Wilson, with his big brain an' merry mood, hain't got any more curiosity about newfangled things than Socrates would have over a starched shirt an' standin' collar."

"A coffee cup is a coffee cup to Brother Wilson, so while he was chuttin' so glib with the charmin' lady on his left he reached over an' got the sugar bowl an' put several lumps in his bowl—bowl in his soup. No wonder you laughed down there. Soup with sugar in it is too modern a mixture for any of us. I'm not findin' fault with Peg Leg for his lack of up to date notions, neither of a prince of a royal house had been with us tonight he would 'a' been obliged to think them thick china cups contained what was made for. Of course the saucer wasn't along with the cup, but it would be only natural for anybody to think that with such a big crowd the supply of dishes might have ran short."

"Thanks, Mr. Chairman," Wilson laughed out. "I'm glad you've explained my awkwardness in such a pleasant manner. I did put the sugar in, and, what is most surprising, I discovered that the stuff was really delightful to taste. I'd advise you all to try it sometime. It was a great improvement. I assure you, Tom Sugart knows how to get up an endless chain dinner, all right, and I'm going to write an article some day proposing to the government that every condemned criminal, as a matter of pure humanitarian principle, be allowed to have his last earthly meal strung out like this one tonight.

"All sorts of things could take place in his favor before a halt was called. He could grow from youth to old age, see whole countries wiped out in bloody, carnage and new ones spring up into activity and wane and die. No, the sugar in the soup is not bothering me, but I'm going to ask Tom in private some day what in the name of common sense he had that little chunk of yellow cheese alongside of every slice of apple pie for. Out of pure curiosity I watched all the plates go back to the kitchen, and the cheese left on them, if it isn't bashed up into some dish for the transient trade and regular boarders, will feed the rats in this house for months to come."

When the laughter over this had subsided Abner resumed his address.

"I hardly know who is makin' this talk, me or my friend," he smiled, "but as long as he does as well as he is now he kin keep on bustin' in."

"Friends, as you all know, this newspaper business is a new thing to me. I got into it to help a powerful mighty young man along, and my intention was to slide back to my farm an' have nothin' to do with it myself, but Howard and simply won't have it that way, an' as it is the biggest fun I ever tackled, I shan't let loose. It looks like I can't anyway, for folks come to me with all sorts of matters that I never thought of before an' which Howard really is too busy to handle. If anybody had told me that a newspaper man here in the mountains could have so many things to dabble in an' satisfy folks about I'd thought he was the boss bar from Danville."

After the laugh that rose over his speech, Abner called on Howard, who made a strong talk, outlining the policy of the paper and assuring the correspondents that he and Abner would look to them for the best support a rural weekly ever had. When Howard sat down Abner, with a mischievous smile in her direction, called on Miss Party Quinn for a few words. This was greeted by loud applause, but that young lady refused to rise. She shook her head resolutely.

"Mr. Raymond tells me," she said, "that as soon as the speeches are over the tables are to be pushed back against the wall and we are to have dancing. I hear the fiddles tuning up now, and it makes my feet tingle. I have had a good time listening to you men, but I'd rather dance than talk myself, and as it is late I hope you will give us a chance."

Abner agreed with her, and he rose from the table, the others following him.

It was a hot Sunday afternoon. Howard was spending the day with his parents. Abner came over to see him about 3 o'clock, and they took a walk along the country road. They passed the cabin of Pole Baker and saw their friend under a big oak in the yard swinging two of his younger children in a swing he had made.

"He's havin' a big time," Abner said admiringly. "Let's not call to 'im. He's got his faults, but they only seem to make 'im a better father at times. I've seen tears in his eyes when he talked about his children havin' just a stepmother. Ef anything in the world will make a man serious that will. The woman he got the last time is a good soul, but the children ain't her'n, an' I reckon ef she don't love 'em it ain't her fault. She's sorry she ain't had a good thing, considerin' Pole's careless habit with the bottle. The Lord knows he's got a big enough brood already."

"You and I haven't a truer friend anywhere," Howard replied. "He'd fight for either of us till he dropped in his tracks."

"Oh, yes, that's a fact," Abner agreed. "An' I'd like to show appreciation of it if I knowed how. He's so all fired sensitive an' touchy that he won't accept a thing. I've tried many a time. I put 'im on the free list to git the paper, an' he went right off in a huff an' borrowed the money an' paid for two years in advance."

Pole had seen them, and, calling loudly, he left the children and came across his cotton field to join them at a bend in the road.

"I was just lookin' fer you two chumps," he said, with a grin, as he burst through a patch of blackberry vines and climbed over the rail fence. "I've got a treat fer you. Uncle Ab, yore watermelons failed this year. I looked at 'em as I passed yesterday, but Pole Baker's didn't, you bet yore life. I put a big one in my spring last night, an' by this time it is as cold as Greenland's icy mountain. Come right on down there. Ef you haven't a tooth for a red meat, this rind melon on a hot day like this something is wrong with your internal machinery."

The invitation was eagerly accepted, and, entering a shady wood on the left of the road, they soon found themselves on the brink of a great spring of clear mountain water. And there, in the shadowed nook and overhung by long moss and fern leaves, floated the melon. Picking up a stick Pole drew it to the brink and lifted it out on the grass. A moment later he took out his long bladed pocketknife, and as he touched the point of the blade to the rind he said:

"I'll show you some'n peculiar about this rattlesnake brand of watermelon. The skin ain't much thicker'n paper, an' the minute the blade goes in even just a little ways the rind begins to crackle an' bust. It looks like the goody inside is swellin' an' tryin' to git out."

"A banquet fit for a king," Abner chuckled. "Ef I don't love 'em as much as a nigger it is because they steal 'em an' my friends give 'em to me."

When the three had eaten all they wanted Abner took out some cigars and proffered them. Howard accepted, but Pole shook his head doubtfully. "I thought this was to be my treat all round," he protested. "I've got some cigars up at the cabin that I always keep fer special use, an' I 'lowed we'd walk back that way an' you could say howdy to my wife, fer she is fond of little attentions like that. Boys, she's a good, steady woman, an' I'm shore I made no mistake marryin' her."

"Oh, take a smoke," Abner still extended the cigar. "They don't cost me a red cent. Every advertiser in Danville chucks 'em at me to git my rate down—that is, everybody but Turp. He knows how to fix the rate hissef, an' he manages it without throwin' out special inducements."

The next morning as Howard was walking to town he passed the gate of a rather pretentious farmhouse only a short distance beyond Trumbley's. It was owned and occupied by Frederic Craig, a middle aged bachelor, who was noted for his overbearing manner, dissolute habits and addiction to strong drink.

When quite near Howard saw Craig leading a horse toward the gate and noticed that his face was flushed, as it always was when he was intoxicated.

"Do you know what I have a good mind to do, you young upstart?"

ated. Bowing, Howard was passing on when Craig leaned on the fence and called out roughly:

"Hold on there! I want to see you!"

Pausing, Howard said, "What is it, Craig?"

With his dark eyes flashing angrily, the color rising into his bald pate and a hand flourishing a riding whip in a threatening manner, Craig blurted out:

"I want to know one thing, an' I want to know it right now on this spot. Did you know that my paper was stopped?"

"Yes, I knew it. I have entire charge of the subscription list," Howard answered, scenting a difficulty, and yet fearless, even angered by the man's tone.

"Then you did it, curse you!" fumed the other. "What did you take my name off for?"

"Because you owe for three years' subscription to the old paper and have not paid up," Howard retorted. "We are entirely within our rights, Craig. We notified you—sent the account to you, and you insulted the bearer."

"You are afraid you won't get it, are you?" Craig demanded fiercely. "Do you know what I have a good mind to do, you young upstart? I have a good mind to walk out there and give you a sound licking."

CHAPTER X.

The Quarrel.

FURIOUSLY angry, Howard stepped close to Craig and glared into the blotted face. "The gate is near," he said calmly. "Come outside and let's settle it now. You are drunk, but I won't take anything off of you nevertheless. You bully everybody, but you can't bully me, Craig."

"You say—you dare to—talk that way to me," Craig blustered, making no movement, however, toward the gate. "You, you—"

There was a sound in the thicket across the road, and Pole Baker suddenly emerged, a stare of surprise in his kindly eyes. "Hold, hold! What's this?" he cried. Then taking Howard by the arm he said: "Come along. Let 'im alone. He's drunk an' don't know his hat from a hole in the ground. You don't want to have to kill a wad-dilla' baby. Say, Craig, take yore hand out of yore pocket. You've got a gun—you are just cowardly enough to tote one all the time, but ef you draw it I'll tear down a panel of this fence an' beat the life out of you. This is a friend of mine, an' what he does goes, an' don't you forget it."

"The young whelp dares to—"

"Dry up!" Pole rested an enormous hand on one of the upright palings. "Dry up ef you know what's good fer you. You owe 'im money as you owe everybody else in the county, an' you are too lordly to swallow a justifiable dun. Come on, Howard. He don't know what he's sayin'."

Craig, muttering threats, lowered his head to the fence and allowed Pole to draw Howard away. For some distance they walked side by side in silence. They were near the town before either spoke. Pole broke the silence.

"Say, Howard, my friend," he began, "the Lord knows I'm a purty thing to advise you after all the shootin' scrapes I've been in, but I hope you'll let this thing slide out of my mind. I know you purty well. You've got a high temper, an' you are burnin' from head to foot right now. It will be like you to let this rattle an' fester till maybe serious trouble may come out of it."

"He'll simply have to take back what he said just now," Howard answered, his lips white and quivering. "When he is sober I shall face him an' remind him of the whole thing, and then if he—"

"That, tut!" exclaimed Pole. "Wipe it out of your mind. He's a bad man an' not responsible. He don't care whether he lives or dies. Somebody will have to kill 'im, but it mustn't be you. Trouble of that sort has ruined many a promisin' young life, an' you can't afford to blight yore prospects for a worthless scamp like him. He makes enemies of everybody he deals with. He can't hire men to work for 'im. He's ruined a dozen good lives."

Howard said nothing, but Pole saw that his anger had not abated in the slightest.

Dinner Stories

"You'll have to take this parrot back," said the minister's wife to the bird dealer. "I can't have him in the house a day longer. The language he uses is simply shocking."

"He never learned none of that kind of language here, lady," protested the dealer. "Are you sure you haven't been leaving him in the room some time when your husband was looking for a collar button that had rolled under the bureau or something?"

A Chicago business man, with many relatives, some of whom were well-to-do, recently sought the services of his lawyer to draw up his will. When, after much labor, the document was completed, the client asked:

"Have you fixed this thing as I wished it, right and strong?"

"I have done my best," said the lawyer.

"Well," continued the client, "I want to ask you another thing—not unprofessionally, however. As a friend, and man to man, who do you think stands the best chance of getting the property when I am gone?"

By his father's stern command, Jackie was forbidden to stay behind in the playground after school hours. He must come straight home; etc.

But Jackie forgot one day, and arrived home very late, very dirty and very tired.

"Look here," said the father angrily, "didn't you promise me you wouldn't stay out and play games?"

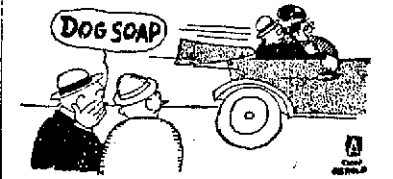

"Yes, father," was the meek reply. "And didn't I promise to punish you if you did stay?"

"Yes, father," said Jackie, still more meekly, "but as I didn't keep my promise, I won't hold you to yours."

Everyday Wisdom

By DON HEROLD

VULGARITY OF WEALTH

A man can make a fortune out of a comic opera if he is lucky, but he is a whole lot more apt to make it out of mops. It is pretty nearly impossible to be clever and make a lot of money at the same time. Shakespeare did not make much. Paderewski is about the only flush pianist, but there are a dozen men who have made millions out of piano polish.

It is very discouraging to a bright, ambitious young man to realize how easy it is to make money. Almost anybody can rise to affluence if he is willing to sell pepper and salt or get up a window-washing trust or organize a factory to make disinfecting powder for bird cages.

Cleverness is something they aim at in colleges—cleverness and its sister, vanity, intelligence—and they both go well with girls, but they don't buy bathroom slippers for the baby.

Buy something for a cent and sell it for a cent-and-a-tenth and you can fit your whole family out with limousines—if you get enough customers.

Shoot the luck. It makes us mad. We've always wanted to be wealthy. And we've always wanted to do something hard. And now we see it plain as day at last that if we ever want to amount to anything financially, we've got to sit down in a swivel chair and start a doorknob foundry or something easy like that.

GERMAN SOLDIERS HAVE ENOUGH FOOD DESPITE SHORTAGE

Correspondent Shepherd Relates of High Prices and Lack of Supplies
in Germany at Present.
By Wm. G. Shepherd.
[Special to the Gazette]

Rotterdam, June 24.—Nobility ever anything tried these days in Germany and towns unless a special is on and the householders of has had a remarkable piece of in securing fat of some sort. Fat of every kind are lacking.

Travelers from Germany to Rotterdam say butter is practically unobtainable. Now and then a householder can secure a half pound of margarine for a dollar a pound.

and is as scarce as butter.
four months ago when the shortage in fats became definite, a few cooks discovered that olive oil could be used for frying meats and that a short time many foreign-born had laid in supplies of olive oil.

At present the olive oil supply is exhausted.

The government experts in their efforts to obtain fats commandeered all the peanuts in Germany.

"I've found of peanut candy," said a German from Munich, who had come to Rotterdam to feed up, as he expressed it, and every afternoon I went to drop a few pennies in a peanut slot machine near my office.

One afternoon I ran out to the machine and found that the peanut slot had been sealed up with a government seal.

"I couldn't break it of course,
later a policeman came and collected all the peanut candy in the machine. He said the government was going to take the candy out of it and extract the oil from them."

There is one gross food that can be obtained in limited quantities in certain districts of Germany is the little canned French sardine. How it gets into Germany no one seems to know.

My grocer always had some sardines, explained a central lady, who was being back to the United States, where I can eat all I want to. He doled them out sparingly without any government regulation, she said, but a breakfast fried in the fish oil was very unlike a breakfast.

There has never been a shortage of lemons and oranges, according to various persons from various parts of Germany. The ally blockade it appears has not as yet shut off the supply of citrus fruits, which reach Germany by devious routes from various warm climates.

Of sugar of course the Germans have an immense supply owing to their beet root industry. Salt, bacon and pepper is scarce. Ham, bacon or pork in any form is unknown to civilians.

Eggs in April were 40 cents a dozen and having hens were so valuable that no chickens were killed for food until their laying capacity declined.

A dressed chicken in a Cologne shop brought two dollars and a half, and during the day while it rested in the shop window many persons stopped to look at it.

The shooting of pigeons in the streets, or on the rooftops is severely punished. It is said that the pigeon population is being rapidly diminished.
Zepplin crews that have passed over Berlin at low altitudes in recent celebrations have commented on the number of pigeons that they have seen on the roofs of office buildings.

On this account there is a keen current in Berlin that the porters of office buildings have the best fed families in the city.

Unbelievably Germany has food—not pork, fat, oils and most of the other edibles that make eating worth while. Where do they go? Who gets them?

The soldiers. Behind the German lines are cattle sheds, always full of pork. From all I could hear in Rotterdam, the German soldiers have no complaint to make of their food.
A civilian in Germany these days is an outcast. More or less, he must feed himself and his family as best he can.

The next three months, until cropping will of course be the hardest of the year for German civilians. They are struggling along with last year's rages. All Germany is waiting for a word from the government to see how the summer crops turn out.

BRITAIN BECOMES MILITARY NATION UNDER COMPULSION

All Englishmen Automatically Become Soldiers During the Duration of War Under Compulsion Act.
By Wilbur S. Forrest.

London, June 24.—Great Britain today became a nation of militarism.

All but a negligible quantity of the male Britishers between the ages of 15 and 41 today automatically became soldiers for the duration of the war under the military compulsion act. They are the army of reserve and will be some trained units as fast as the military authorities can put them through the necessary steps.

It is estimated that upwards of 600,000 are thus added to the military force, 350,000 of them, and 250,000 are youths under 20. The army is divided between married and single men, who have held back mainly for family or business reasons.

Beginning today every man walking the streets or highways of Great Britain, excluding Ireland, is subject to challenge by a police constable and must produce his certificate of military exemption forthwith or face the consequences.

But few are free under the compulsion act. Total exemption is granted to clergymen, exchanged prisoners of war, and to those who have been promoted to the rank of captain or higher in the army.

From today onward for thirty days hundreds of tribunals throughout the country will consider the last applications for exemption. It has been previously announced that the absolute freedom from military service cannot be granted to those pleading "serious handicap."

Hence the tradesman who must leave his shop, the professional man his office, the manufacturer his plant and the husband his home despite business or domestic hardship, if his objections are not proved to the satisfaction of the tribunal must serve in a non-combatant capacity.

Even the government employee must prove that his services are indispensable to the nation.

British railway stations, especially those of the larger cities, took on a new aspect today. More women and children crowded the platforms than ever before. It was a scene of school picnic except tears and goodbyes took the place of laughter and
joy. The first drafts of the conscript army started toward the training camps. In the big London railway stations, husbands and fathers, inevitably loaded with more baggage than any law allows, remained on the platforms until trains were ready to go.
Bidding goodbyes to their wives and children. Heartrending scenes were enacted. Trains steamed out and thousands of persons stepped into strange paths in which they would continue to walk until peace brings Great Britain back to normal balance.

During the past month millions of pieces of furniture have been packed in thousands of British homes and put into storage. The government has lightened the load of the married conscript in this respect. Local authorities are empowered by parliament to store the household effects free, pay a reasonable charge for the carriage and insurance.

There are more empty houses for rent in England, Scotland and Wales than at any time in history. The married soldier's family in most cases has not attempted to keep the home fires burning. Wives and children have gone back to their mothers' or into lodgings. They will make out on the government allowance that goes to every soldier's wife and children. In exceptional cases the local authorities are empowered by the government to offer funds for the amount to be decided by the baronet needs.

Every day for weeks the railway stations and the homes will be through what started today—unless peace puts an end to it.

Place He Had Been Looking For.
The hobo from the city has different ideas from the farmer as to working hours. The Country Gentleman says that a hobo got a job from a farmer in the busy season. He worked till 9:30, then had his supper. At four the next morning he was called to get up. He ate a hearty breakfast, then started upstairs again, saying: "This is the best place I ever worked—two suppers in one night and back to bed again."

Days That Count.
The course of life is a thousand trifles, then some crisis; nothing but green leaves under common sun and shadow, and then a storm or a rare June day. And far more than the storm or the perfect day the common sun and common shadow do to make the autumn rich. It is the "every day" that count. They must be made to tell, or the years have failed.
—William C. Gannett.

BOARD FILES REPORT FOR ASPHALT PAVINGS

Recommendations Made to the Council to Use Bermudez Asphalt on Two Streets.

The Board of Public works at their meeting held yesterday afternoon voted to recommend to the council that the contract for the paving of Oakland avenue and Forest park boulevard be awarded to Brown & Connors, with the condition that Bermudez asphalt be used. This recommendation and report will be submitted to the council for final action, but as all members of the council are members of the board, it is assumed that the report will be acted upon in a favorable manner.

City Engineer G. W. Kerch and W.
H. Dougherty prepared a detailed report which showed the various steps in the "asphalt war" that has kept the board busy investigating various problems connected with the bidding and the study of asphalt. It was noted that the specifications were so chanaged that a clause divided the asphalt binders into two classes, upon which proposals upon which pro-fite relative bids were received. The basis for division was whether the asphalt was a natural material softened to the required consistency with a flux, or a manufactured product.

After considering the various claims and allegations submitted to prove that Sarcos asphalt, made by the Standard Asphalt and Rubber company, is a natural product, the board decided to award the bid to the lowest bidder, Brown & Connors, with the specification that Bermudez asphalt be used instead of the Sarcos brand. In their decision it is evident that the board does not seriously consider that the claim of the Standard company that Sarcos is a natural lake produce, was a sincere one.

The city officials hope by putting in the Bermudez asphalt, a better street will result, for by improving the quality of the asphalt binder it is believed the top course of the paving will be strengthened and offer greater resistance to traffic. When the contract is closed up the contracting firm will start immediately to build the streets. John Brown reported that he was prepared to start the work sooner than required by the city and under favorable conditions expected to have the pavings done well within the time limit.

Put Up The Proposition Interestingly

About That Real Estate And You Can Sell It

Some people in this town will always tell you that "this is not a good time to sell real estate." It is a persistent delusion with them.

The Where-to-Live problem faces quite as many people today as it ever did. And there are just as many people today who are able, and who intend to solve it by buying homes as there ever were.

If you have property to sell, and will advertise it ADEQUATELY you can sell it with little delay.

The property must be "good value." And you must tell all of the facts about it in your ads—and tell them INTERESTINGLY.

Then you must stand fast for a time, if necessary. You must KEEP AT IT. Even if you have to keep it up for some time, the ultimate cost to you for your advertising would appear very trifling as the price paid for your results.

GIVE THE GAZETTE WANT AD A CHANCE TO PROVE TO YOU THAT REAL ESTATE IS NOT SO DEAD IN THIS TOWN AS YOU MAY THINK.

THE PIG IN A POKE

By KEITH KENTON.

"It's a gentleman to see your father, Miss Betty. What shall I tell him?"

Betty gave a final pat to her freshly coiffed hair, adjusted an invisible hairpin and surveyed herself critically. "Tell him I'll be down right away, Nannie."

"I wish father wouldn't send for people to come when he's away," Betty complained. "And particularly when I want to go skating. The new heating system is a nuisance anyway."

"How do you do," she asked politely of the young man who got up and bowed as she came into the living room. "I know you came to see father, but he's taken the car and gone to hunt a delegate for the convention. But if you like I'll show you over the house and let you look at the what-you-may-call-it in the cellar—the furnace, I suppose."

"I think, if you don't mind, I'll wait until Mr. Bradshaw returns." He smiled his amusement. "Does he generally go around hunting delegates as he would a prize pig for Christmas dinner?"

Betty laughed. "Not exactly, although, after all, delegates are pigs in pokes. You never can tell what you are getting."

"Nice lovely place for a delegate to come," commented the heater man. "I'd rather like to be one myself."

"Say—I wish mother wasn't away. She's in Florida. It's such a dandy day and the ice on the lake is like glass. Do you skate? I could keep an eye on you as well outside as I can in the house. Dad's so afraid you'll get away!"

"I should say I do! Love it! But I have no skates."

"Oh, that's all right. Bobby has his sled out this morning and his skates are in the hall. They are adjustable, you know."

"That's fine! I'm glad you suggested it. If you don't think Bobby will care, I'll use his skates gladly. It is too fine a day to waste on heaters, isn't it?"

"It depends," said Betty demurely, "whether the term is masculine or neuter gender. To prove that it all depends upon the meaning of the word, I'm going to waste a little more time on you by winding up the phonograph for you while I get my things. What record shall it be. Here's a lovely waltz—'Estelita' and so dreamy and smooth you forget you're dancing and just float. There, isn't that pretty?"

"Dandy! It's a fine tune! But run along now and get your coat."

"I'd better not skate with you until I know your name," said Betty, putting her head through the door.

"Henderson," returned the man quickly. "I get 'em usually."

"All right, Mr. Henderson. Put on a new record if you like. I'll be ready in a minute."

After many turns around the lake, Betty exclaimed: "My but I'm hungry! Let's stop long enough to go over to Boyd's and have a hot chocolate!"

"The very thing!" assented the young man. "They had hot chocolate and Betty was presented with a box of candy."

"Let's go home now and talk until dad comes," suggested Betty. "I'm tired and, besides, I want to hear about the football you used to play and the golf you play now, and I want to eat my candy. Really, Mr. Henderson, you are a very interesting man and I'm glad you came. I'm sorry you can't dance, though. It's so easy to turn back the rug! Father's home! That's the car at the door, and I do wonder what our delegate's like."

"I'm beginning to feel rather sorry for the delegate," remarked the young man.

"Here's the heater man, father," called Betty. "I kept him for you. I was afraid he'd be bored and leave before you came home, so I amused him by taking him skating."

"I don't understand," puzzled daddy. "The man from Steel and Hardman's is downstairs now. He says the gauges need adjusting."

"Then who—" began Betty in amazement.

"The comedy is ended," he said solemnly. "And as a fitting climax I have to declare my identity. Miss Betty, forgive me! I'm Henderson Hewitt, delegate, the bug-a-boo of a preacher, the pig-in-a-poke, and the most remorseful creature in the world for what I've done. You took me for granted, so I allowed my mistaken identity to be my excuse for a most wonderful morning."

"What shall we do to him, Betty?" asked daddy, with a twinkle in his eye. "Be lenient—he's young, daughter, and human."

"And he didn't mind if I did play a waltz," conceded Betty. "In fact he even said it was pretty. Let's leave it to Bobby, dad. He'll know what to do." And so it was settled.

His Concern.

"What's the matter, old man? In debt?"

"Exactly."

"I wouldn't worry about that if I were you."

"I'm not worrying about being in debt; what troubles me is that my creditors refuse to let me get in any deeper."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, June 24, 1876.—The Artesian well on the fair grounds is in business and is throwing water in abundance, in larger quantity and with more force than ever. This condition of things has been brought about by a mechanical contrivance similar to the Sibley Rotary engine, using the head from the well for a owner to drive the engine. The machine was designed and constructed by Mr. Fenner of the Doty works, to whom all interested are under lasting obligation.

Two young men started up the river yesterday in a sail boat to join the picnic party. One of them, a good swimmer, was thrown overboard by an accident in attempting to handle one of the sails. He floundered in the deep water for a moment and at one time his condition seemed precarious. Luckily however, he happened to turn his face when the toes of his boots touched the bottom, and he was rescued. Commend us to big boots.

H. B. Walker met with an unfortunate accident this afternoon while working on the building being erected by John B. Watson. He was bending a block when the axe glanced striking him on the instep of the left foot, making a wound about four inches long, cutting to the bone, though the bone was not damaged. The cut is a severe one and will disfigure Mr. Walker for some time. Dr. Loomis was called to dress the wound.

The teachers of the Janesville public schools return thanks to the Mutual Improvement club for the complimentary invitations to their excursion yesterday.
